Ring in the new season at the Palast Berlin: nearly 500,000 tickets for Grand Show THE WYLD have now been sold, ten months after the premiere. To celebrate a successful start to the new season, the beautiful Nefertiti along with her entourage and the legendary girls' kickline treated themselves to a sightseeing tour of the capital.

During the day, Nefertiti stands watch as a star attraction at the Neues Museum, but almost every night from now until the summer of 2016, she awakens to new life in THE WYLD. Yet even the world's first top model likes to take time off. And so the mysterious Palast queen together with her tour guide and party following made their way to Alexanderplatz. As they marvelled at the Urania World Time Clock, which recently gained heritage status, they created a glittery gold sensation among curious onlookers.

The world-famous girls' kickline of the Palast Ballet Ensemble also took advantage of the sunny weather and gave thanks in their own way for the great audience responses. All thirty-two ladies posed by the Brandenburg Gate and turned Berliners' heads in the heat. Two iconic symbols of Berlin in perfect symphony.

Burkhard Kieker, managing director of visitBerlin, places the Palast at the very heart of Berlin: "The Palast's shows and its unique girls' kickline are among the city's symbols, like the Brandenburg Gate. The Palast offers true cosmopolitan entertainment that otherwise you can only find in Las Vegas."

Until 16 July 2016 on the largest theatre stage in the world.
