Cameron's life is like his paintings: abound with brilliant colours, enthralling, different. The sought-after photographer jets around the globe, always accompanied by his beloved muse. She is his only love and the inspiration for his art. When he loses her, his happiness is destroyed.

Plunged into darkness, Cameron stares glumly at the photos on his walls. They exude an inexplicable attraction. And then they really do begin to return to life ... Light magically draws him into his most emotional and beautiful memories. Is his muse maybe still trying to tell him something?
